

10/20/09 - MARCILAN is coming to the AAOMR

I always look forward to the American Academy meeting of Oral and Maxillofacial Radiology every year. It's been always a good chance to meet with colleagues, friends, and new folks who joined the academy or have interest in the specialty, and this year is no exception.

Please join me at the 60th annual session AAOMR 2009 meeting in Louisville, Kentucky. I will personally be presenting the latest pathology edition to the website, what has been updated from the previous website for those who had the chance to see it, and lastly the future of Marcilan and where we are heading with the development. For those who own an iPhone or iPod touch we have something for you. One of the coolest things we been working on lately is the new iPlanar Sectional app for the iPhone and we have a demo to show you.

The abstract title is "Development of a web based instructional module for interpretation of craniofacial Cone Beam CT pathology". The presentation will be in the main lecture hall scheduled for Friday October 23, 2009 @ 3:00 pm

See you there!
